Telehealth has the potential to improve the delivery of healthcare in a variety of ways. Telehealth can play a role in helping seniors age in place and live independently as long as possible. Appropriate monitoring can reduce physician and critical-care visits, and improve medical outcomes.

However, there are significant challenges to address and obstacles to overcome. These include complex issues such as regulation, provider reimbursement, privacy and interoperability.

This conference will help you determine to what degree telehealth is fact and how much of it is fantasy. The time to think about it is now.

The Telehealth: Fact or Fantasy? conference is organized by the Clark County Commission on Aging. It is the first of its kind in our community. Its aim is to provide an opportunity for the articulation and discussion of this emerging technology and how it can enhance the health and well-being of our citizens.

There is no cost to attend this event but an RSVP is requested.
